From Oregon to Zambia, the response to our last acquisitions list has been most encouraging. While some friends from mimeo-list days warmed to the new format, we were also pleased at the many thank-you's from those who felt that the Clearinghouse is providing a "much-needed service" and "fills an important gap recognized by many educators and researchers." In light of the current emphasis on research utilization and educational change, it was particularly gratifying to note that even so elementary a form as an acquisitions list could begin filling the information needs of research, project, and classroom personnel. In the future we hope to expand this disseminating function to include information on current research.

We have also been asked about the kinds of documents that would be most useful to the collection. Since the strength of the collection and the quality of services depend in large measure upon our access to the educational literature, it is hoped that this acquisitions listing will result in a mutual exchange of information. The Clearinghouse would welcome unpublished papers, progress reports, reports of studies, preprints and reprints (particularly the former), dissertations, notices of project activities, curriculum materials, newsletters, bulletins, and other forms of information relevant to our subject concerns. Every effort will be made to adhere to author restrictions on circulation. In addition, informal notices of research-in-progress are encouraged.

There are a few points we would like to emphasize:

The Acquisitions List, distributed regularly by the Clearinghouse, is available free of charge. It does not include unindexed materials peripheral to the collection. No attempt has been made through this list to assess the permanent value of the papers on it, or their potential usefulness.

Providing there are no author restrictions on circulation, items on the Acquisitions List may be obtained at a charge of 10¢ per page to cover costs of photoduplication. Whenever possible, author abstracts will be supplied without cost, upon request. Availability of such abstracts is noted at the end of the citation, i.e. "Abstract."

SERVICES

Searches. Services are extended to the R & D Center, Harvard University, and, to the degree that resources permit, to other individuals and agencies. The Clearinghouse is prepared to search its collection and reference file in response to requests for information, and to refer users to other persons or agencies with similar interests.

Additional publications. Bibliographies are available on the following topics and are regularly supplemented: disadvantaged, racial issues, child development, juvenile delinquency, dropouts, reading, learning process, verbal learning, achievement, teaching, curriculum, and personality. They are not intended to be comprehensive but comprise a selected list of materials contained in the Clearinghouse files.

If we can be of assistance to you, or if you wish further information, please contact the Clearinghouse Manager. If you wish to be placed on our mailing list to receive the Acquisitions List or any of the bibliographies, let us know, specifying desired subject bibliographies.
